- When trading the turtle soup pattern wait for price to trade through a high and into a resistance level and then form an optimal trade entry on a smaller time frame chart (5 minute or 15 minute chart).

- If you can get 20 pips out of the Asian session, consider it a windfall.
- Don't trade just simply on SMT divergence. Only refer to it once you have determined a key support/resistance level.
- Getting stopped out is a part of the game. How you look for the next trade is what is going to define you as a trader. When you have a loss, mark it up as a learning experience but do not let it hinder your next trade.
- Always forget the last trade whether it be profitable or a loser. Whatever that trade has done for you, once you are out it can't do anything else for you. You can't make or lose any more money on it.
- Before you consider taking a trade
- The more pips a price swing moves, the better the trade setup is going to be. For a really high odds situation you want to see at least a 40 pip swing.
- Always take profits at the Fib high or low that you measure the swing from.
